industry from its location in the San Fernando Valley. Though historically the firm has restricted its services to principally file manipulation, color retouching, and minimal design support for its customers, who are primarily content providers for the rapidly growing home entertainment industry, in recent years Target has responded to customer demand for additional services, to include digital asset management.

This service involves providing ready access storage and security for its customers "digital assets," usually represented by the print and manufacturing production files owned by Target's customers, which represent entertainment content, an increasingly valuable assets for the customers. Because of this service, the Target helps to facilitate the expansion of the digital libraries offered by its customer base. As a result of its key role in the supply chain of its customers, the Target believes that it is in a very strong position relative to the print production segment of the projects on which it works, and it is this position which ownership feels can offer a buyer with production capability beyond that of the Target, and a commitment to meeting the needs of these very demanding customers, substantial increased print volume, in addition to the highly profitable volume of business that exists currently at the Target. This additional print volume, currently being performed by other suppliers using the Target provided digital production files, is estimated at between $5 and $9 million in annual revenues.
